OBJECTORS' AMENDED REQUEST FOR ATTORNEY FEES, COSTS, AND PAYMENTS

ARGUMENT

Objectors ask the Court to find that the Objection of Andrews and Weber provided a material benefit to the class. The compensation of the class appears likely to increase by nearly $42 million as a result of the rejection of the first settlement and this Court's subsequent summary judgment decision. See September 12, 2013 Order, Dkt. 362, at 7. It is reasonable to conclude that this is, speaking roughly, an 84-fold magnification in the size of the settlement.<sup>1</sup> As such, the Objectors are entitled to attorneys' fees and costs, and an incentive payment for their willingness to come forward and to bring an objection that created a substantial benefit for the class.

The Objectors therefore request an award of fees, costs, and a class representative incentive. A litigant or a lawyer who recovers a common fund for the benefit of persons other than himself or his client is entitled to a reasonable attorneys' fee from the fund as a whole. Alyeska Pipeline Serv. Co. v. Wilderness Soc'y, 421 U.S. 240, 275 (1975). This principle applies to objector's counsel and plaintiff's counsel alike. Vizcaino, 290 F.3d, at 1051-52.

Attorneys whose actions confer benefits upon class members are entitled to file a claim for reasonable compensation for the attorneys' efforts. See, e.g., Great Neck Capital Appreciation Inv. P'ship, L.P. v. PriceWaterhouseCoopers, L.L.P., 212 F.R.D. 400, 413 (E.D. Wis. 2002). When such a claim is presented, the court should consider whether the efforts of counsel for the objectors "improved the settlement, assisted the court, and/or enhanced the recovery in any discernible fashion." Id. (internal quotations omitted). In this case, the objectors and their counsel respectfully hope that this Court would concur that all three of these objectives were accomplished. Our objection demonstrated that the

<sup>1</sup> As noted in our previous Objection, it is certainly arguable that the originally proposed class benefit was less than half a million dollars. The obscurity of that benefit's valuation was a factor in this court's rejection of the original settlement. If the figure of half a million dollars is high, it follows that our estimate of an 84-fold magnification in the size of the settlement would be too low, and therefore that objectors might receive even more credit for an even larger relative increase in the class benefit.

1 original settlement's calculation of the class injury that had been sustained and its relation
2 to the compensation it would receive were hazy at best; from the bench, this Court
3 announced that it was "in complete agreement" with our argument. Furthermore, in its 4 Order denying approval of the initial settlement (Dkt. 250), this Court found that precisely
5 this failure of these two factors – injury and compensation – to relate to each other
6 precluded any finding that the settlement was fair, reasonable and adequate:

7 "[T]he court also finds that that some objectors have raised legitimate and 8 serious concerns about the value of the settlement to the class relative to the 9 value of the claims surrendered. Given the settlement parties' failure to 10 provide such evidence in support of the settlement, their dismissal of the 11 objectors' arguments rings hollow. At bottom, the court concludes that the 12 absence of evidence as to the actual value to the class of the coupons offered
13 in settlement and the value of the claims surrendered precludes any finding 14 that the settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate under either Rule 23(e) or 15 28 U.S.C. § 1712(e)." Id., at 25.

16 The Objectors therefore wish to note that they hit their target, and to thank this 17 Court for its recognition of same. (Indeed, objectors' "lawyers who contribute materially 18 to the proceeding" are entitled to fees, even if the court would have, sua sponte, made the 19 same finding without objection. Reynolds v. Beneficial Nat. Bank, 288 F. 3d 277, 288 (7th 20 Cir. 2002). Any other result would be unfair because objectors "must decide whether to 21 object without knowing what objections may be moot because they have already occurred
22 to the judge." Id.)

23 The Objectors have not only improved the substance of the settlement, but the 24 process of the settlement. Class action settlements require a higher level of scrutiny than 25 ordinary cases because there always exists a potential conflict of interest between the class
26 and class counsel. Thorogood v. Sears, 627 F.3d 289, 293-94 (7th Cir. 2010) (citing long
27 list of authority for this proposition), vacated on other grounds, Thorogood v. Sears, 2011
28 U.S. LEXIS 4939 (Jun. 27, 2011); accord Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp., 150 F. 3d 1011, 1026 (9th Cir. 1998); Mars Steel v. Continental Ill. Nat. Bank and Trust, 834 F.2d 677,
681-82 (7th Cir. 1987). Because the risk of collusive settlements is much greater in class

1 actions than in ordinary litigation, it is “imperative” that a trial judge conduct a “careful
2 inquiry” into the fairness of a proposed class settlement. Mars Steel, 834 F.2d at 682.

3 Objectors can assist the settlement process by providing independent scrutiny of a
4 proposed settlement, a “critically valuable service”. Lane v. Facebook, 696 F.3d 811, 830
5 (9th Cir. 2012) (Kleinfeld, J., dissenting). “Objectors serve as a highly useful vehicle for 6 class members, for the court and for the public generally” in evaluating the terms of a
7 proposed settlement to ensure that it is fair, adequate, and reasonable. Great Neck, 212
8 F.R.D. at 412. Objectors improve the process by reintroducing adversarial critique at the 9 fairness-hearing stage – the point at which the adversarial relationship between the parties
10 has ended. This adversarial dynamic helps the trial court ensure that the proposed 11 settlement meets the standards of Fed. R. Civ. P. 23. See In re General Motors Corp.
12 Pick-Up Truck Fuel Tank Litig., 55 F. 3d 768, 803 (3d. Cir. 1995) (“where there is an
13 absence of objectors, courts lack the independently derived information about the merits 14 to oppose proposed settlements”).

15 Objectors do not wish to penalize the class because class counsel’s inadequate 16 settlement necessitated their objection, and therefore request that their counsel’s fees and 17 costs be deducted from Class Counsel’s proposed fee award. See Lonardo v. Travelers
18 Indem. Co., 706 F. Supp. 2d 766, 816-817 (N.D. Ohio 2010) (awarding objectors’
19 attorneys’ fees out of class counsel’s fee award); Parker v. Time Warner Entm’t Co., L.P.,
20 631 F. Supp. 2d 242, 277 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (same) Great Neck Capital, 212 F.R.D. at 416-
21 17 (same);;; In re Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 273 F. Supp. 2d 563, 572 (D.N.J. 2003),
22 aff’d 103 Fed. Appx. 695, 697 (3rd Cir. 2004) (same); In re Ikon Office Solutions, 194
23 F.R.D. 166, 197 (E.D. Pa. 2000) (same).

24 Objectors’ expenditures of time and effort should not have been necessary to compel class
25 counsel to make a reasonable fee request. The costs of proposing an unreasonable
26 settlement should not be borne by class members themselves—who had nothing to do
27 with the proposal. The costs should be borne by class counsel—who had complete responsibility for the first proposal. Equity suggests that the class should not have to pay twice for a benefit they should have received at the outset. Cf. In re Classmates.com Consol. Litig., No. 09-cv-0045-RAJ, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83480, at *20 (W.D. Wash. Jun. 15, 2012) (“[C]lass counsel cannot satisfy its duty to the class by ignoring the weaknesses in the settlements it negotiated.”); id. at *23 (reducing fee to less than 20% of the common fund to “reflect[] that counsel should not benefit from its efforts to win approval of an inadequate settlement.”).

Objectors have laid out the basis for their calculations below and in the attached Declaration from their attorney, Daniel Greenberg. (See Exhibit 1.) To summarize, they request fees of $88,901.95, costs of $1,098.05, and incentive payments to two objectors for $2,500 each.

FEE CALCULATION

One conventional theory of fee calculation would imply that the Center is entitled to submit a relatively large request for attorneys’ fees. If one makes the assumption (which is generous in this context – see footnote 1, supra) that the original proposal provided a half-million dollars for the class, but that the new settlement provides $42 million for the class, this would constitute an 84-fold increase in the settlement’s total value. As a matter of law, when an objection is responsible for a certain percentage of class recovery, the objector is entitled to that percentage of class counsel’s fee award. E.g., In re Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 273 F. Supp. 2d at 572 (awarding objector 1.4% of class counsel’s fee award for objection that was responsible for 1.4% of class recovery); Larson v. Sprint Nextel Corp., 2010 WL 234934 at *28 (D.N.J. Jan 15, 2010) (awarding objectors’ attorneys 4.4% of attorneys’ fee award for providing 4.4% of total class benefit), rev’d on other grounds sub nom Larson v. AT&T Mobility LLC, 687 F.3d 109 (3d Cir. 2012). Cf. also Lan v. Ludrof, 2008 WL 763763 at *28 (W.D. Pa. Mar 21, 2008) (awarding objector 25% of the increase in the benefit to the class). A literal interpretation

1 of this rule would lead to startling results: if this court were to find that the objectors were
2 responsible for the increase in class recovery, they arguably would be entitled to 3 something like 84 times the fees that class counsel would receive in this action.

4 It is fairer, however, if this Court views both class counsel and the objectors as 5 jointly responsible for the settlement improvements. Furthermore, because the attorneys
6 for Andrews and Weber are affiliated with the non-profit Center for Class Action
7 Fairness, tax law limits how much they may collect in fees and expenses, and so they ask
8 only for a small portion of the award that the law allows. This Court would be within its 9 discretion to award Andrews and Weber, and their attorneys, a reasonable amount that 10 would cover incentive fees, actual costs, and a small percentage of the overall value of the 11 settlement to the class. Therefore, the Center requests an aggregate award of $95,000 –
12 which is roughly one-fifth of 1% of the benefit conferred. To repeat, this fee request is 13 especially reasonable because objectors ask for a tiny fraction of the benefit that the 14 Objection was instrumental in conferring.

15 Many courts agree that objectors' counsel are entitled to a recovery that is on par
16 with the compensation of class counsel: were this Court to follow suit, it would entitle the 17 Objectors and their attorneys to a substantially higher rate of compensation than we 18 request. See, e.g., Dewey v. Volkswagen of Am., 909 F. Supp. 2d. 373, 396 (D.N.J. 2012)
19 (awarding the Center for Class Action Fairness “10.5% of the benefit conferred, well
20 within the range of acceptable percentages-of-recovery”); In re Puerto Rican Cabotage
21 Antitrust Litig., 815 F. Supp. 2d 448, 468 (D.P.R. 2011) (finding that “10% [of a $3
22 million benefit conferred] is reasonable and appropriate to reflect Objectors' time, effort,
23 ingenuity and success in increasing the kitty for the benefit of the Class”).

24 ///

The Center has successfully requested and received fees eight times previously.<sup>2</sup> The $88,901.95 in fees requested for the Center here is especially reasonable compared to the benefits conferred in each of those other cases:

Case	Benefit Conferred	Award as % of Benefit	Award Granted to CCAF
Apple <sup>3</sup>	$2,500,000	3.48%	$87,000
Lonardo <sup>4</sup>	$2,000,000	1.99%	$39,936
Bayer <sup>5</sup>	$5,840,000	0.31%	$18,068
Fogel <sup>6</sup>	$18,000,000	0.26%	$47,577
New Mtr. Vehicles <sup>7</sup>	$500,000	2.00%	$10,000
Electronic Arts <sup>8</sup>	$11,500,000	0.30%	$33,975
Weeks <sup>9</sup>	$443,906	4.7%	$21,000
Dewey <sup>10</sup>	$782,283	11%	$86,000

<sup>10</sup> Dewey v. Volkswagen of Am., No. 07-2249, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 177844 (D.N.J. Dec. 14, 2012).

1 To state the obvious, if we are to calculate an award based on conferred benefits,
2 the award requested here would be smaller than any of the previous awards, described
3 immediately above, that CCAF has ever been granted.

4 As required by Local Rule 54-16, we have included a reasonable itemization of our
5 and description of the work performed in our Exhibit of Fees and Costs. (See Exhibit 2.)
6 A lodestar cross-check shows that our request is reasonable: a district court's use of a
7 lodestar cross-check is appropriate, because "the lodestar method can 'confirm that a
8 percentage of recovery amount does not award counsel an exorbitant hourly rate.'" In re
9 Bluetooth Headset Prod. Liab. Litig., 654 F.3d 935, 945 (9th Cir. 2011). Our Exhibit 2
10 contains a detailed lodestar breakdown of our requested fees (which, again, total 11 $88,901.95), as well as a breakdown of our costs (which total $1,098.05). We have 12 requested a lodestar multiplier of less than 1.4.

13 We also request a $2,500 incentive award for each of our clients. It is appropriate to 14 award objectors incentive awards, for much the same reasons that class representatives
15 receive them. Lonardo, 706 F. Supp. 2d at 816-817. The figure of $2,500 is one-quarter of 16 the compensation that class counsel requests for its two named plaintiffs; as discussed in 17 our Declaration, we feel that the burdens and risks carried by successful and conscientious
18 class-action objectors makes compensation appropriate.

20 CONCLUSION

21 Objections entail risk; they require the outlay of time, money, and effort.
22 Successful, relevant objections that improve outcomes deserve compensation. Objectors
23 Bill Andrews and Walter Weber respectfully request this Court to award attorneys' fees,
24 as well as related costs and payments, in the amount of $95,000.
